Join the fun with a photography workshop that begins in Minneapolis. Participants drive caravan style and photograph along the way to Lily, South Dakota. This very small town of Lily will become your base camp for the workshop.

This unique opportunity provides encouragement, instruction, critique, and inspiration to bring out your own personal creative expression stimulated from fellow photographers and the wide-open mid-western countryside in the rain or shine.

Leave from Minneapolis in the early morning. Drive alone or we will help to arrange a car pool. There will be several photo opportunities along the way and a late lunch stop. The drive is almost entirely on Highway 12, The Yellowstone Trail, a beautiful two-lane road that passes through many small towns and picturesque farmland. Lily is located 250 miles from Minneapolis on a plateau between Aberdeen and Watertown near the eastern South Dakota border with Minnesota. Lily is now a "ghost town" of the past surrounded by farmland under a big sky. The surrounding area is made up of smoothly shaped hills, tree groves, gravel roads, lakes, raptors, waterfowl, pheasants, deer, farm animals and giant fields of crops. Close to Lily you will find abandoned buildings, animals, prairie churches, other small towns and many lakes. The light around sunset and sunrise is wonderful for photography.

Lily has a current population of only 6 live in residents at this time. Lily began in the 1860's and peaked with a population around 200 people. Howard Christopherson owns a small cottage on the main street in Lily. (Known as the Lily Pad) The town has a humble history museum with artifacts located right next door to the Lily Pad. The town also has two churches, a small preserved Post Office, and a classic town hall with a bell tower, a Post WWII American Legion Hall, a graveyard and two rental houses and some abandoned buildings.

We encourage you to experiment on this workshop and use film cameras and digital if you have both. We will review some work during the workshop, digital equipment is needed for that. Shooting with film is your option. A laptop computer and photographic software is recommended. Later in October you will be asked to submit 5 of your best images to be published on the Icebox Gallery News Letter.
